Dear diary,

Today has been horrific. Without doubt, this has been the worst day of my life but worse than that is that I don't know what will happen next...

The day began as usual-getting ready for work and preparing to leave the villa. Without warning, the ground began to vibrate and a sound emanated from the mountain. It grew and grew in ferocity until I had to cover my ears to stop them from hurting, I thought they would start bleeding. I heard people shouting, "HELP!" but I knew there was no way to help them.

Suddenly, the mountain seemed to swell and out poured a bright, orange liquid. A huge amount of rock and dust was thrown into the sky-it blocked out the sun! A strong smell of rotten eggs hit me-I was almost sick. I panicked. I ran. I didn't know where I was going but I knew I had to get away from the snake of molten metal that was eating its way through the town.

In the pitch black, I stumbled and fell. I heard people screaming and shouting as they ran for cover. A grey substance like snowflakes floated down from the sky, only these snowflakes burned the skin as they landed. Even so, my bare arms and face were burned raw. I ducked for cover into alcove-far away I could hear the sounds of animals and humans in pain.

Once I caught my breath, I headed for where I thought the water must be. After I had reached the river, I blacked out. I felt a pair of hands dragging me away from the heat, dust, pain and death. I woke up a few hours later. "Who are you?" I asked to my saviour.

"A friend," replied an unknown face. I was lucky-I managed to get away, one of the few. There aren't many of us. I have just watched my home burn to the ground and be smashed to pieces by falling rock.

Who knows what will happen next? I am only pleased that I am not alone.
